I sometimes see news about disasters in Japan. There are many disasters in Japan. They are earthquakes, *typhoons and so on. But I wasn't interested in them. I didn't think disasters were *my own problem.

One day, Takuya said to me, "The tsunami *drill will be held at our school by *the local community next Sunday, the school wants the students as *volunteers. I'm going to *take part in the drill. Why don't you come with me?"

Takuya is my good friend, I decided to join it with him.

Many local people came to our school on that day. The drill started. First, we went to a high place near our school. It was easy for me to go to the high place. But it was very difficult for some old people and some small children to do so. Some high school students helped the old people and the small children.

Then we went back to our school. In the gym, many people were working together. Some students were talking with old people. Some students were taking care of small children. I made *rice balls with some students and gave them to the old people and the children. One of the old people smiled and said to me, "Thank you very much. You are working hard to help us. We need high school students *in case of a disaster." I was very happy to hear that.

After the drill, Takuya said to me, "How was the drill today?" I said, "It was a very good experience for me. Before the drill, I thought, "What can I do in case of a disaster?" but I didn't know any good answers.

I learned many things through this drill. In case of a disaster, high school students can work hard to help other people. That's the most important thing I learned from the *evacuation drill. I thought it was good to be ready for disasters. We don't know when the next disaster is. So [A] . If we are ready for them, we can *reduce *damage from disasters. We should remember that.

【問題 8】次の英文を読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。（各 4 点×3 ＝12 点）

I like birds. I have read many books written about birds. I have found an interesting story in a book. Today I will tell you a story about *a mudflat. A mudflat is a good place for birds. I will tell you about the man saving a mudflat. He learned many things from nature.

When the man was an elementary school student, he often visited a beautiful mudflat near his house with his friends. He enjoyed catching fish, looking for *crabs and watching birds. He loved spending time there. After about twenty years, he visited the mudflat again. He became sad when he saw the mudflat. It was a very bad condition. No child was playing there, because of a lot of *litter. There were a lot of old shoes, plastic bottles, broken bikes and other things on the mudflat. He decided to clean the mudflat. ① It was a big job to do.

He began to clean the mudflat *alone. He was busy because he had a job. But he came to the mudflat to clean it every day, even on rainy days. ② People never helped him. They said "(　A　)" They couldn't understand him. They thought he could not make the mudflat beautiful again. He felt very lonely sometimes.

One day, he was tired and began to lose *hope. However, he found something under the mountain of litter. There was a small crab walking on the *mud. He remembered that he saw the same kind of crab there twenty years ago. He was surprised. He never thought that he could see it again on such an *unclean mudflat. "I still have a hope for the future! I will be able to show children the beautiful mudflat again." He thought so and began to work more. Also, he walked around the large ground near the mudflat to know how many eggs of birds were there. He did this for four months, and he found about nine thousand eggs of birds. This made him very happy.

He found another hope. He thought, "So many birds are living and baby birds are born here. ③ For birds, I want to save the mudflat as a place to get food." He told people that the mudflat was a very important place for birds. Birds need a safe home to live.

One day after cleaning the mudflat, he found a cup of hot tea and a short letter written to him. He was happy to know that someone understood him. Later, some children began to come to the mudflat to play. ④ .

They enjoyed catching crabs and looking for *worms. Their mothers also came to help him. The groups of people came to the mudflat, put the litter on the *trucks and worked together to clean the mudflat. It became more beautiful than before. A lot of people began to visit there to have a good time. The mudflat became famous, and the city also helped him. He *kept cleaning the mudflat for about twenty years, and finally, it *was registered as *a protection zone in an international *convention.

Why was the man able to save the environment? He started working alone, but he wasn't able to save it alone. ⑤ A lot of people understood save and helped him, because they knew he was working hard for many years. He kept working because he had hopes for the future. We can learn from this story that if we have a dream, we can get a strong power and we can do a difficult thing. Dreams can make big changes. It is important to never *give up.
